MARSUPILAMI™

HOOBAH HOOBAH HOP!

TV Series

Marsupilami is back! The comic-book and animated hero hops, leaps and swings onto the small screen once again for a totally new animation series! Recast in a dynamic new look and bursting with humor, the series targets kids of today. While youngsters zip off into the jungle for fun with Marsupilami and his new friend Hector, parents can rest assured that their children are picking up sound values like ecological awareness, civil courage, and the importance of friendship and loyalty.

The brand-new series takes us deep into the Palombian rainforest, where the Marsupilami is the king of the jungle! Whoever contests his title has to confront the mammal's tail, the longest and most versatile in the jungle. His new friend is Hector, a super-bright but super-clumsy kid from London, who's accompanying his aunt Diane, a botanist, on a research trip.

Hector is soon having lots of fun with his new friend "Marsu" and his family. But there's something rotten in the state of Palombia: Felicia Devowert! The eccentric multimillionaire plans to raze the jungle and build a super-modern megalopolis in its place. Besides being an ecological disaster, this would also mean robbing Marsupilami, his family and the other inhabitants of the jungle of their natural habitat. Felicia Devowert must be stopped!

Produced by Samka Productions and Marsu Productions in co-production with France 3 and in cooperation with ZDF and ZDF Enterprises, the new adventures of Marsupilami highlight the series' core ecological values, which it shares, for example, with the internationally respected WWF. With various websites, including a WWF-related "Save Palombia!" site, the producers and creators of "Marsupilami" draw the attention of youngsters in particular to the dangers of deforestation. The classic comic-book character is back, and he's showing kids of today that being cool means living in harmony with nature!
