Since the death of his single mother, ten-year-old Michael lives in a children's home and is desperate to be with a real family again. But one day, when bouncing around in his mother's home, he comes across a letter and finds a clue about his father Tom. Full of anticipation and excitement, he sets out to visit him and imagines him to be a great, strong man who will protect him. Much to Michael's disappointment, his father Tom turns out to be vertically challenged! When the other home children learn about it, the chaos is perfect: the others abandon Michael who holds his father responsible for this. In his rage, he becomes quite unfair and their fragile relationship is put to a hard test. An intriguing father-son story and a plea for tolerance in every respect.
