The explosion of the Deepwater Horizon oil rig in April 2010 focused the world's attention on the dangers looming in deep-sea oil drilling. Among the men exposed to these dangers every day are the "Delta Divers," a team of highly skilled underwater adventurers whose job is to dismantle unused or decrepit rigs. They're commercial divers who take on seemingly impossible challenges, often with low-tech equipment. It's a job where the slightest mistake could trigger a mega-catastrophe.

License to Drill

Distributor: ZDF Enterprises, Mainz, Germany

Genre: Documentaries / Factual Series

Format: 6 x 45' / HD

Canada's Far North is a wasteland of snow and ice. But it comes alive every winter when teams of hardy, daredevil men come to drill for natural gas. The film follows the drilling operations in one of the last frontiers on earth, where men and machines are pushed to the breaking point – and sometimes break. It's a dangerous mission and a race against deadlines, storms and the Arctic spring that transforms roads into swamps that can swallow a whole truck.

Hitler's Lost Battleship

Distributor: ZDF Enterprises, Mainz, Germany

Genre: Documentaries / History & Biographies

Format: 1 x 50' / HD

Ambushed in late 1939 by British cruisers off the coast of Uruguay, Hitler's prized "pocket battleship" and high-tech wonder, the "Admiral Graf Spee," was blown up by its captain, Hans Langsdorff, who then committed suicide. This documentary retraces the events that led to the ship's destruction. Along with high-end re-enactments, CGI reconstructions made after original plans from the Third Reich's secret archives, and surprising findings by naval researchers shed light into this mystery.
